I.
INTRODUCTION

3 Plaintiffs have brought this federal lawsuit because Proposition 8, the California ballot 4 initiative that stripped gay and lesbian individuals of their recognized right to marry the person they 5 love, violates their rights under the United States Constitution. Prop. 8 violates the Due Process 6 Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment because it denies a single disfavored group, gay and lesbian 7 individuals, the fundamental right to marry. Prop. 8 violates the Equal Protection Clause of the 8 Fourteenth Amendment because it discriminates against Plaintiffs on the basis of their sexual 9 orientation and gender without any compelling, or even rational, basis for the discrimination. Every 10 day that Prop. 8 remains the law of California, Plaintiffs and thousands of other gay and lesbian 11 individuals are denied fundamental rights that are cherished and enjoyed by others, and they suffer 12 substantial, irreparable harm.

13 Plaintiffs intend to present to the Court a robust record of evidence—including testimony 14 from Plaintiffs, Defendants, the proponents of Prop. 8 (“Intervenors”), other fact witnesses and 15 leading experts—that will powerfully demonstrate both the unconstitutionality of Prop. 8 and the 16 devastating harm that it causes. Plaintiffs will prove their claims in a public trial consisting of live 17 witness testimony, cross-examination, and argument, except as to those issues that may be resolved in 18 Plaintiffs’ favor as a matter of law through summary judgment. A prompt, thorough trial on all 19 disputed factual issues is the most effective and efficient way to present the record on which this case 20 will be decided. Plaintiffs respectfully request that the Court set this case for trial before the end of 21 the calendar year.

22 This Court has recognized the importance of building a complete record in this case and 23 proceeding promptly to trial. In its June 30, 2009 Order, this Court recognized that Plaintiffs’ claims 24 raise “serious questions” and stated its intention to “proceed directly and expeditiously to the merits 25 of Plaintiffs’ claims and to determine, on a complete record, whether injunctive relief may be 26 appropriate.” Doc #76 at 5. The Court identified a number of factual issues that may have an impact 27 on Plaintiffs’ claims and stated that “[t]he just, speedy and inexpensive determination of these issues 28 would appear to call for proceeding promptly to trial.” Id. at 9 (emphasis added).

1 Intervenor argue that there should be no trial in this case, and that numerous factual and legal 2 issues should be disposed of before discovery is even conducted. Intervenor urge the Court not to 3 follow the steps through which trial courts traditionally build factual records and decide cases—4 discovery, followed by motions for summary judgment, followed by trial—but instead to have an 5 early round of pre-discovery dispositive motions followed by extensive, post-discovery submissions 6 on all issues that remain to be resolved. Intervenor’s approach is neither just nor efficient. It would 7 deprive Plaintiffs of the opportunity to build a complete factual record, to present their case through 8 live witness testimony, and to cross-examine in open court those who seek to defend and justify the 9 denial of their constitutional rights. It would similarly deprive the Court of the opportunity to 10 question fact and expert witnesses and to assess their credibility in Court. Lastly, the preparation of 11 extensive briefing on every issue that may possibly affect the merits of Plaintiffs’ claims, and the 12 submission of voluminous written testimony, deposition excerpts, and exhibits is in no way more 13 efficient or effective than having experienced lawyers try their case before the Court.

14 Plaintiffs respectfully submit this Case Management Statement to address how this case 15 should proceed up to and including trial on the merits. See July 2, 2009 Tr. at 34:2-12 (directing the 16 parties to submit case management statements describing “what facts you think can be determined by 17 the Court without the necessity of further proceedings, those facts that you think may require 18 discovery, those facts which may require resolution by some means other than judicial notice, and a 19 plan of action, whether it’s a motion for summary judgment or motions, plural, for summary 20 judgment on one side or the other. But I would like to get down to the specifics of how we are going 21 to proceed.”).¹ First, Plaintiffs will provide a general overview of their position on case management

24
25 ¹ Plaintiffs, Defendants, and Intervenor have had several telephonic discussions of the issues 26 raised by the Court. These included a detailed telephonic meet-and-confer on July 20, 2009 in 27 which the parties discussed their overall approaches to case management and how they 28 intended to address the specific factual issues identified by the Court. The parties concluded that it would be better to submit separate Case Management Statements than to attempt to agree on a joint Case Management Statement. The parties exchanged draft Case Management Statements on August 5, 2009. Plaintiffs’ understanding of Intervenor’s positions with respect to case management is based on these communications and exchanges.

1 in this action. Second, Plaintiffs will address each specific factual issue raised in the Court's June 30, 2 2009 Order. Third, Plaintiffs will propose a pre-trial and trial calendar for this action.

3 II.
4 OVERVIEW OF PLAINTIFFS' POSITION ON CASE MANAGEMENT

5 A. Trial

6 Plaintiffs will prove their claims in a public trial consisting of live witness testimony, cross-7 examination, and argument. The trial record will include testimony from Plaintiffs, Defendants, 8 Intervenors and other fact witnesses, documentary evidence relating to the Prop. 8 campaign, and 9 testimony from leading experts in several fields relevant to Plaintiffs' claims.² Plaintiffs expect trial 10 to last between two and three weeks and respectfully request that it be scheduled for December 2009.
11 Plaintiffs' approach is consistent with this Court's prior direction concerning building a record and 12 proceeding promptly to trial. See Doc #76 at 9 ("The just, speedy and inexpensive determination of 13 these issues would appear to call for proceeding promptly to trial."); see July 2, 2009 Tr. at 25:4
14 ("We develop records with trials.").

15 The crux of Intervenors' case management plan is that there should be no trial at all.
16 Intervenors appear to base their position that trial is unnecessary on their view that many, although 17 certainly not all, of the facts at issue in this case are "legislative facts" as to which the Court is not 18 required to follow strict evidentiary procedures or take judicial notice.³ For several reasons, this

19 ² Plaintiffs had hoped it might be possible to use stipulations between Plaintiffs and Intervenors 20 to narrow the issues that the Court must resolve. However, after close analysis of the areas of 21 dispute and several meet-and-confer discussions with Intervenors, Plaintiffs do not anticipate 22 that stipulations will significantly narrow the issues before the Court. Discussions between 23 Plaintiffs and Intervenors since the July 2, 2009 Case Management Conference have led to no 24 meaningful agreements. While the parties may be able to stipulate to certain specific, publicly known and objectively verifiable facts that may be relevant to the factual issues identified in the Court's June 30, 2009 Order, any such stipulations are unlikely to resolve the larger factual issues themselves or to eliminate the need for evidence on such issues.

25 ³ Generally, legislative facts are "those applicable to the entire class of cases," whereas 26 adjudicative facts are "those applicable only to the case before" the court. United States v.
27 $124,570 U.S. Currency, 873 F.2d 1240, 1244 (9th Cir. 1989). "Adjudicative facts are facts 28 about the parties and their activities, businesses, and properties, usually answering the questions of who did what, where, when, how, why, with what motive or intent; adjudicative facts are roughly the kind of facts that go to a jury in a jury case. Legislative facts do not usually concern the immediate parties but are general facts which help the tribunal decide questions of law, policy, and discretion." Marshall v. Sawyer, 365 F.2d 105, 111 (9th Cir.

1 Court should decline Intervenors' invitation to resolve the important issues presented by this case 2 without any trial and live testimony.

3 Plaintiffs should have the opportunity to put on their case before the Court, including their 4 live testimony and the live testimony of experienced experts who will address subjects of great 5 importance to the resolution of Plaintiffs' claims. See United States v. Yida, 498 F.3d 945, 950 (9th 6 Cir. 2007 ("Underlying both the constitutional principles and the rules of evidence is a preference for 7 live testimony."). The Court should have the opportunity to observe and question the witnesses in 8 this case, including both fact and expert witnesses, in order to assess their credibility and better 9 understand the relevant testimony and the issues presented. See id. ("Live testimony gives the jury 10 (or other trier of fact) the opportunity to observe the demeanor of the witness while testifying.").
11 Similarly, Plaintiffs should have the opportunity to cross-examine, in open court and before the finder 12 of fact, those defending and seeking to justify the discriminatory scheme established by Prop. 8. See 13 Govt. of the Virgin Is. v. Aquino, 378 F.2d 540, 548 (3d Cir. 1967) ("It is indeed rarely that a cross-14 examiner succeeds in compelling a witness to retract testimony which is harmful to his client, but it is 15 not infrequently that he leads a hostile witness to reveal by his demeanor—his tone of voice, the 16 evidence of fear which grips him at the height of cross-examination, or even his defiance—that his 17 evidence is not to be accepted as true, either because of partiality or overzealousness or inaccuracy, 18 as well as outright untruthfulness."). Lastly, given the breadth of issues presented by Plaintiffs' 19 claims and the existence of alternative theories and standards of review, a traditional, live trial will be 20 more efficient and effective than having the parties brief any and all issues that remain in dispute and 21 leaving the Court to sort through those submissions in chambers.

22 The distinction that Intervenors seek to draw between legislative and adjudicative facts does 23 not justify a case management plan that bypasses trial. First, Intervenors do not and cannot contend 24 that all of the facts implicated by Plaintiffs' claims are legislative as opposed to adjudicative, yet they

26 [Footnote continued from previous page]

27 1966) (internal citation and quotation marks omitted). Rule 201 of the Federal Rules of 28 Evidence, which sets forth the circumstances under which a Court may take judicial notice of facts, is limited on its face to adjudicative facts, thus giving courts greater latitude and discretion when deciding legislative facts. See Fed. R. Evid. 201 advisory committee's note.

1 offer no explanation of why the relevant adjudicative facts should not be decided through trial. This 2 case will require resolution of numerous adjudicative facts that pertain specifically to the parties, 3 including the circumstances of and injuries to each Plaintiff and the campaign by Intervenors to pass 4 the specific initiative that is challenged here. Under Intervenors' proposed case management plan, 5 even true adjudicative facts would be resolved solely on the papers and without a trial.

6 Second, while a court may not be required to follow formal evidentiary and trial procedures
 7 with respect to legislative facts, it undoubtedly has discretion to do so and Intervenors cite no 8 authority to the contrary. Indeed, courts have found that “[e]videntiary hearings, although not 9 necessary to determine legislative facts, nevertheless may be helpful in certain circumstances.” 10 Ass’n of Nat’l Advertisers, Inc. v. FTC, 627 F.2d 1151, 1163-64 (D.C. Cir. 1979) (observing that 11 some legislative facts “justify exploration in a trial-type format because they are sufficiently narrow 12 in focus and sufficiently material to the outcome of the proceeding to make it reasonable and useful 13 for the agency to resort to trial-type procedure to resolve them.”); H.B.R.R. Co. v. Am. Cyanamid Co., 14 916 F.2d 1174, 1183 (7th Cir. 1990) (Posner, J.) (noting that the line between adjudicative and 15 legislative facts is not “hard and fast” and that “[i]f facts critical to a decision on whether [a particular 16 legal standard should apply] cannot be determined with reasonable accuracy without an evidentiary 17 hearing, such a hearing can and should be held”); see also Fed. R. Evid. 201 advisory 18 committee’s note (Judicial determination of legislative facts “should, however, leave open the 19 possibility of introducing evidence through regular channels in appropriate situations.”). In this case, 20 a traditional trial is the best possible course of action. For example, because many of the facts that 21 Intervenors portray as legislative are likely to be presented through experts, there is every reason to 22 use the usual methods of testing those experts’ opinions, including live testimony and cross-23 examination.⁴

 25 ⁴ Intervenors suggest that a trial is unnecessary because, when addressing true legislative facts, 26 an appellate court can consider evidence not in the record. This misses the point. Both sides 27 have made clear that they intend to rely on expert testimony with respect to many of the facts 28 at issue in this case. Expert testimony must be solicited in the district court and is not admissible for the first time on appeal. See Dietary Supplemental Coalition, Inc. v. Sullivan, 978 F.2d 560, 562 (9th Cir. 1992) (“Because the expert testimony was not before the district court, it is not part of the record on appeal.”); Hart v. Sheahan, 396 F.3d 887, 894 (7th Cir.

1 Third, while Intervenors note that some other courts have decided cases involving marriage
 2 equality without a trial, they ignore the fact that Romer v. Evans was decided following a three week
 3 trial. See Romer v. Evans, 517 U.S. 620, 625 (1996). In Romer, as here, the plaintiffs challenged a 4 ballot initiative that amended a state constitution to strip gay and lesbian individuals of rights that 5 they previously enjoyed. The trial court built a record through trial, the case went up on appeal, and 6 the plaintiffs' rights were ultimately vindicated. Given the importance of the issues presented by this 7 case and the likelihood that, regardless of the outcome, it will be reviewed on appeal, this Court 8 should conduct a full trial on the merits as to all disputed facts.⁵

9 B. Discovery

10 Plaintiffs intend to use written discovery and depositions to build the factual record in this 11 case. One important area of discovery will be the Prop. 8 campaign itself, including without 12 limitation: (1) how it came about and who was behind it; (2) how the campaign formulated the 13 arguments that it would make to the voters in favor of stripping gay and lesbian individuals of the 14 right to marry; (3) the intent of the campaign and the voters in proposing and passing Prop. 8; and 15 (4) the role that animus toward and/or disapproval of gay and lesbian individuals played in Prop. 8.

16 Plaintiffs wish to conduct discovery on an expedited basis and will commit to such discovery 17 whatever resources are necessary to build a complete factual record as quickly as possible. Plaintiffs 18 propose that all fact discovery be completed by October 2, 2009. Plaintiffs propose that the time for 19 responding to written discovery be shortened to 14 calendar days. Because Plaintiffs anticipate that 20 Intervenors may resist certain discovery to which Plaintiffs are entitled, Plaintiffs request that the 21 Court implement a procedure through which all discovery disputes would be briefed and decided 22 within two weeks of the dispute arising.

24 2005) (only "academic or other studies" regarding "legislative" facts may be cited for the first 25 time on appeal). For the reasons explained above, the best way to solicit expert testimony is 26 through a live trial in which the Court can assess the credibility of each expert and ask questions of each expert.

27 ⁵ If the Court is considering adjusting trial procedures based on the role of legislative facts in 28 this case, Plaintiffs respectfully request that the parties be given a full opportunity to brief how, if at all, this distinction should affect the presentation of evidence, which specific facts are indeed properly characterized as legislative, and which are adjudicative.

1 Plaintiffs intend to present testimony from expert witnesses on several subjects pertaining to 2 Plaintiffs' claims. Plaintiffs understand that Intervenors also will be relying on expert witnesses for 3 numerous subjects. Plaintiffs propose that the parties exchange reports from all designated experts on 4 October 9, 2009, one week after the close of fact discovery. The parties would then exchange reports 5 from true rebuttal witnesses (witnesses testifying to matters that could not have been foreseen at the 6 time of the initial exchange of reports) by October 19, 2009 and complete all expert depositions by 7 October 23, 2009.

8 It is clear from Intervenors' positions on case management that they will try to restrict the 9 issues on which Plaintiffs even get the benefit of discovery, first by asking the Court to resolve 10 certain factual and legal issues on an early dispositive motion before discovery can be taken, and 11 second by arguing that certain broad subjects—including the intent of the proponents of Prop. 8 and 12 the voters who passed it—are wholly irrelevant and therefore off-limits for discovery. Of course, the 13 Federal Rules of Civil Procedure entitle Plaintiffs to liberal discovery that need only be "reasonably 14 calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence." Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1). While 15 Plaintiffs believe that they can build the factual record they require through targeted and expedited 16 discovery, any attempt by Intervenors to prevent Plaintiffs from building that factual record should be 17 rejected. See July 2, 2009 Tr. at 12:8-13 ("I want to give the plaintiffs, the defendants and the 18 intervenors the opportunity to make the record they think is appropriate for the decision.").

19 C. Dispositive Motions

20 Plaintiffs propose that there be a single round of dispositive motions, to be filed after fact and 21 expert discovery are completed. Plaintiffs propose that all such dispositive motions be filed by 22 October 30, 2009, one week after the close of discovery, and that dispositive motions be heard by the 23 Court three weeks later, on November 20, 2009.

24 Intervenors propose an initial round of briefing on supposedly dispositive or controlling legal 25 issues before discovery has been taken and a complete factual record assembled. This proposal by 26 Intervenors, like their paper trial proposal, is an attempt to avoid a trial on the merits in which 27 Plaintiffs will have an opportunity to present live witness testimony and cross-examine Intervenors' 28 witnesses. It is an unsubtle attempt to take issues off the table before Plaintiffs even have access to

1 discovery.⁶ Early motions for partial summary judgment would be wasteful under the circumstances
 2 of this case, where Plaintiffs' claims raise numerous disputed factual issues and the entire proceeding, 3 including dispositive motions, can and should be conducted on an expedited basis. Such a procedure 4 would almost inevitably lead to duplicative briefing, where issues are briefed once before discovery
 5 and yet again after discovery is closed (not to mention a third time if Intervenors get the "paper trial" 6 they desire). Plaintiffs propose that all dispositive motions be filed after fact and expert discovery are 7 completed, giving each side one opportunity to seek adjudication of claims or issues as to which they 8 believe no triable issue of material fact exists.

9 10 III.
PLAINTIFFS' CASE MANAGEMENT PLAN WITH RESPECT TO THE DEVELOPMENT AND RESOLUTION OF SPECIFIC FACTUAL ISSUES

11 This Court has identified certain specific issues that may need to be resolved in order to 12 decide Plaintiffs' claims, and it also has asked that the parties address which facts can be resolved 13 without further proceedings, which ones will require discovery, and which may require resolution by 14 a means other than judicial notice. Plaintiffs will address each issue in turn.⁷ As a general matter, 15

16 ⁶ Intervenors take the position that Baker v. Nelson, 409 U.S. 810 (1972) controls the outcome 17 of this case. Intervenors are wrong. In Baker, over 25 years ago, the Supreme Court 18 dismissed "for want of a substantial federal question" an appeal from a Minnesota Supreme 19 Court decision rejecting federal due process and equal protection challenges to the State's 20 refusal to issue a marriage license to a same-sex couple. 191 N.W.2d 185 (Minn. 1971). But 21 summary dismissals are binding only "on the precise issues presented and necessarily 22 decided," Mandel v. Bradley, 432 U.S. 173, 176 (1977) (per curiam), and only to the extent 23 they have not been undermined by later "doctrinal developments" in Supreme Court case 24 law. Hicks v. Miranda, 422 U.S. 332, 344 (1975) (internal quotation marks omitted). Neither 25 requirement is met here. The issue decided in Baker—a State's complete refusal to recognize 26 same-sex relationships—is different from the issue presented here, namely whether California 27 may constitutionally reserve marriage for opposite-sex couples and relegate same-sex couples 28 to the lesser and unequal status of domestic partnership. Moreover, the Supreme Court's subsequent decisions in Lawrence—which invalidated a state prohibition on same-sex intimate conduct on due process grounds—and Romer—which struck down a state initiative prohibiting any government action to protect gay and lesbian individuals from discrimination on equal protection grounds—have fatally undermined Baker. Indeed, at least one federal district court in California has concluded as much. See Smelt v. County of Orange, 374 F.
 Supp. 2d 861, 873 (C.D. Cal. 2005) ("Doctrinal developments show it is not reasonable to conclude the questions presented in the Baker jurisdictional statement would still be viewed by the Supreme Court as 'unsubstantial.'"), rev'd in part on other grounds, 447 F.3d 673 (9th Cir. 2006).

⁷ Plaintiffs have limited their discussion to the factual issues specifically identified by the Court. While Plaintiffs believe that the Court's list is quite comprehensive, they reserve the

1 Plaintiffs believe that further proceedings will likely be required as to each of the issues identified by 2 the Court. Plaintiffs expect that Intervenors will be unable to come forward with competent evidence 3 sufficient to raise a genuine issue of material fact as to some or all elements of Plaintiffs' claims, and 4 as to those elements Plaintiffs will seek summary judgment in its favor at the close of discovery.
 5 However, with respect to any remaining factual disputes between the parties, a public trial on the 6 merits is the appropriate proceeding through which to resolve those disputes.

7 A. Facts Pertaining to the Appropriate Level of Scrutiny.

8 Plaintiffs will demonstrate that Prop. 8 violates the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth 9 Amendment because it denies to a single, disfavored group—gay and lesbian individuals—the right 10 to marry the person they love, a right that is cherished and enjoyed by virtually all other citizens.
 11 Plaintiffs believe that Prop. 8 should be evaluated under strict or at least heightened scrutiny, both 12 because a fundamental right is at issue and because gay and lesbian individuals as a group satisfy the 13 established legal standard for heightened scrutiny. See United States v. Hancock, 231 F.3d 557, 565
 14 (9th Cir. 2000) (a “law is subject to strict scrutiny if it targets a suspect class or burdens the exercise 15 of a fundamental right”); see also City of Cleburne v. Cleburne Living Ctr., 473 U.S. 432, 442-47 16 (1985) (identifying four factors that guide the Court’s suspect class inquiry, including (1) whether the 17 group at issue has suffered a history of purposeful discrimination; (2) whether the characteristics that 18 distinguish the group bear any relation to the group’s ability to participate in and contribute to 19 society; (3) whether the distinguishing characteristic is immutable; and (4) the political power of the 20 subject class). However, Plaintiffs also contend and will demonstrate that Prop. 8 fails even under 21 rational basis scrutiny because no rational basis exists for Prop. 8’s exclusion of gay and lesbian 22 individuals from civil marriage.

23 Intervenors have taken the position that gay and lesbian individuals should not be treated as a 24 suspect class, and thus not receive the benefit of heightened scrutiny, because sexual orientation has 25 no settled definition and is somehow illusive or subjective as a concept. This position only reflects 26

28 right to raise additional factual issues as necessary, or to modify their position on particular issues discussed herein as fact and expert discovery progress in this matter.

1 the depth of the dispute between Plaintiffs and Intervenors that this Court will need to resolve.
 2 Plaintiffs will demonstrate that a person's sexual orientation is an integral part of that individual's 3 identity, and that people whose sexual orientation is gay or lesbian make up a group that should be 4 treated as a suspect class for purposes of equal protection analysis.⁸

5 1. The History of Discrimination Faced by Gay and Lesbian Individuals.

6 Plaintiffs intend to present evidence at trial demonstrating that gay and lesbian individuals 7 have faced a long, pervasive and harmful history of discrimination, both governmental and private, 8 that continues today. Plaintiffs' evidence will include their own testimony, possibly the testimony of 9 other fact witnesses, and expert testimony. Plaintiffs will depose any experts put forth by Intervenors 10 on this subject.

11 The parties are unlikely to be able to reach a stipulation that would eliminate the need for 12 evidence concerning the history of discrimination against gay and lesbian individuals. While 13 Intervenors have indicated that they do not dispute that gay and lesbian individuals have faced past 14 discrimination based on their sexual conduct, they seem unwilling to concede that gay and lesbian 15 individuals have faced discrimination based on their sexual orientation and their status as gay or 16 lesbian. Plaintiffs will argue that the discrimination faced by gay and lesbian individuals has gone far 17 beyond their sexual conduct, and is often based on perceptions, prejudices, or other impressions that 18 are not based on or related to any specific conduct, whether sexual in nature or not. Intervenors also 19 apparently intend to argue that discrimination against gay and lesbian individuals has decreased

 21 ⁸ Contrary to Intervenors' position, courts have proven quite capable of understanding the 22 concept of sexual orientation and applying that definition to a group of people who are gay or 23 lesbian. See Romer v. Evans, 517 U.S. 620, 623 (1996) (recognizing that the constitutional 24 amendment challenged in that case "prohibits all legislative, executive or judicial action at 25 any level of state or local government designed to protect the named class, a class we shall 26 refer to as homosexual persons or gays or lesbians.") (emphasis added); In re Marriage 27 Cases, 183 P.3d 384, 442 (2008) ("Because a person's sexual orientation is so integral an 28 aspect of one's identity, it is not appropriate to require a person to repudiate or change his or her sexual orientation in order to avoid discriminatory treatment."). Similarly, the State of California expressly bars discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation through the Unruh Civil Rights Act. See Cal. Civ. Code § 51(b) ("All persons within the jurisdiction of this state are free and equal, and no matter what their sex, race, color, religion, ancestry, national origin, disability, medical condition, marital status, or sexual orientation are entitled to the full and equal accommodations, advantages, facilities, privileges, or services in all business establishments of every kind whatsoever.") (emphasis added).

1 significantly in recent years, further evidencing their intent to dispute that the existence of 2 discrimination merits heightened scrutiny.

3 Moreover, even if Intervenor were willing to concede that this element of the test for 4 heightened scrutiny is met in this case, this would not eliminate the need for the Court to hear 5 evidence concerning the discrimination suffered by gay and lesbian individuals. First, such evidence 6 is relevant to issues other than heightened scrutiny, such as the role of animus in California's passage 7 of Prop. 8. Second, there are clearly aspects of the discrimination issue on which the parties will be 8 unable to reach agreement, such as whether specific examples of law or conduct constitute 9 discrimination and the pervasiveness of such discrimination both historically and today.

10 2. Whether the Characteristics Defining Gays and Lesbians as a Class Might 11 Affect Their Ability to Contribute to Society.

12 Plaintiffs intend to present evidence at trial demonstrating that being gay or lesbian bears no 13 relationship to a person's ability to contribute to society, and that gay and lesbian individuals have 14 made and will continue to make significant contributions to society. Plaintiffs' evidence will include 15 their own testimony, possibly the testimony of other fact witnesses, and expert testimony. Plaintiffs 16 will depose any experts that Intervenor put forth on this subject.

17 Intervenor have indicated that they may be willing to stipulate that, other than as to 18 procreative ability, gay and lesbian individuals are as able to contribute to society as are 19 heterosexuals, although they have not proposed specific language for any such stipulation.
20 Intervenor also could represent, on the record, that they will not dispute that this element of the test 21 for heightened scrutiny under the Equal Protection Clause is met in this case. But as with the issue of 22 historical discrimination, Plaintiffs do not believe that these steps would eliminate the need for 23 evidence. For example, evidence of the contributions of gay and lesbian individuals to society is 24 fundamental to demonstrating and understanding the irrationality and injustice of singling them out 25 for exclusion from civil marriage. Moreover, Plaintiffs anticipate that there are aspects of the extent 26 and ability of gay and lesbian individuals to contribute to society, including as parents and with 27 respect to responsible and planned procreation, to which Intervenor will not be willing to stipulate.
28

1 B. Facts Pertaining to Whether Plaintiffs' Claims Involve a Fundamental Right and 2 Warrant Strict Scrutiny on That Basis.

3 The United States Supreme Court has long recognized that the right to marry is a fundamental 4 right protected under the Due Process Clause and that any restriction of that right must withstand 5 strict scrutiny. See M.L.B. v. S.L.J., 519 U.S. 102, 116 (1996) (“[c]hoices about marriage” are 6 “sheltered by the Fourteenth Amendment against the State’s unwarranted usurpation, disregard or 7 disrespect”); Loving v. Virginia, 388 U.S. 1, 12 (1967) (the “freedom to marry has long been 8 recognized as one of the vital personal rights essential to the orderly pursuit of happiness by free 9 men”). By amending the California Constitution to limit the definition of marriage to a man and a 10 woman, and thus excluding same-sex couples from the institution of civil marriage, Prop. 8 deprives 11 gay and lesbian individuals of their fundamental right to marry. Thus, the strict scrutiny standard 12 must be applied to Prop. 8.

13 Intervenors do not dispute that the right to marry is a fundamental right, nor do they seriously 14 contend that Prop. 8 would withstand strict scrutiny. Instead, Intervenors seek to cast the right at 15 issue in this case not as the long-established right to “marriage,” but rather as some new right to 16 “same-sex marriage.” This is a word game that could be used to justify virtually any discrimination 17 that has existed for a sufficiently long period of time. This case no more involves some new right to 18 “same-sex marriage” than Loving v. Virginia involved a new right to “interracial marriage.” Thus, 19 the issue in this trial will not be, as Intervenors would have it, whether “same sex marriage” is deeply 20 rooted in this nation’s history and tradition. Rather, the issue will be whether the deeply rooted right 21 to marry has been denied to a single, disfavored group without a compelling state interest for 22 doing so.

23 1. The History of Marriage and Why Its Confines Have Evolved Over Time.

24 Plaintiffs intend to present evidence at trial concerning the history of marriage and how it has 25 evolved over time, particularly to rebut any argument by Intervenors that marriage has somehow had 26 a singular or static definition over time. Plaintiffs also will present evidence of historical limitations 27 to and burdens on marriage that were once considered “definitional” but are now universally deemed 28 untenable and, in many cases, unconstitutional. Plaintiffs expect to present primarily expert testimony on this subject and will depose Intervenors’ experts. Plaintiffs and Intervenors agree that

1 they may be able to stipulate to certain publicly known and objectively verifiable facts about the 2 history of marriage, but certain aspects of the history of marriage will remain to be resolved by 3 the Court.

4 C. Facts Pertaining to Potential State Interests Raised by Intervenors.

5 Regardless of the level of scrutiny ultimately applied in this case, resolution of the merits of 6 Plaintiffs' claims will require the Court to evaluate interests offered by Intervenors to justify Prop. 8 7 and determine whether they satisfy the applicable standard of scrutiny. Plaintiffs will show that none 8 of the supposed interests offered to justify Prop. 8 provides even a rational basis, let alone a 9 compelling basis, for its unequal treatment of gay and lesbian individuals.

10 1. The Longstanding Definition of Marriage in California.

11 Plaintiffs intend to present evidence concerning the evolution of the definition of marriage in 12 California over time, including specifically (a) the abandonment of restrictions and qualifications 13 once considered "definitional," and (b) the repeated and concerted efforts of groups disapproving of 14 gay and lesbian individuals to prevent or undo any advances that those individuals made toward 15 obtaining marriage equality. Plaintiffs will rely primarily on expert testimony for this subject and 16 will depose Intervenors' experts. Plaintiffs and Intervenors agree that it will likely be possible to 17 stipulate to certain publicly known and objectively verifiable facts about the historical definition of 18 marriage in California, but that there will be other aspects of this topic as to which the parties will 19 disagree.

20 2. Whether the Exclusion of Same-Sex Couples from Marriage Leads to 21 Increased Stability in Opposite-Sex Marriages or Whether Permitting 22 Same-Sex Couples to Marry Destabilizes Opposite-Sex Marriages.

23 One justification that repeatedly has been offered for excluding gay and lesbian individuals 24 from civil marriage is that doing so somehow "protects" marriage, presumably for opposite-sex 25 couples. In order to refute that purported justification and show that it provides no rational basis for 26 Prop. 8, Plaintiffs intend to present evidence at trial both that excluding same-sex couples does not 27 increase the stability of opposite-sex marriage and that including same-sex couples would not 28 destabilize opposite-sex marriages. Plaintiffs will show that recognizing the loving and committed relationships of same-sex couples in the same manner that we recognize similar, opposite-sex

1 relationships will have no adverse affect whatsoever on opposite-sex relationships. Plaintiffs will 2 rely primarily on expert testimony on this issue and will depose Intervenors' experts. Intervenors 3 have indicated they may present evidence that permitting same-sex marriages would destabilize 4 opposite-sex marriages.

5 3. Whether a Married Mother and Father Provide the Optimal Child- 6 Rearing Environment and Whether Excluding Same-Sex Couples from 7 Marriage Promotes This Environment.

8 Plaintiffs intend to present evidence at trial that there is no difference between the ability of a 9 same-sex couple to provide a healthy, positive child-rearing environment and the ability of an 10 opposite-sex couple to provide such an environment. Plaintiffs also will present evidence at trial that 11 excluding same-sex couples from marriage does not advance, and indeed actually harms, the 12 objective of providing an optimal child-rearing environment for children. Plaintiffs will depose 13 Intervenors' experts on this subject. Intervenors have acknowledged that agreement on this subject is 14 not likely.

15 4. Whether and How California Has Acted to Promote These Interests in 16 Other Family Law Contexts.

17 Plaintiffs intend to present at trial two categories of evidence relevant to this issue. First, 18 Plaintiffs intend to present evidence that California has, through various legislative enactments, taken 19 positions that are contrary to certain of the justifications offered in support of Prop. 8, such as the 20 suggestion that same-sex couples provide a less-than-optimal child-rearing environment, have not 21 been subjected to discrimination, or are not fully contributing and equal members of society. Second, 22 Plaintiffs intend to present evidence that California has not enacted legislation that would better and 23 more directly serve some of the purposes articulated in support of Prop. 8, thus demonstrating that 24 Prop. 8 is underinclusive and driven not by the proffered justifications but rather by animus toward 25 gay and lesbian individuals. Plaintiffs intend to present expert testimony on this issue and will 26 depose Intervenors' experts. Stipulations may be possible as to publicly known and objectively 27 verifiable facts concerning laws that have or have not been passed in California, but other facts on 28 this issue and concerning the implications of agreed-upon facts likely will require resolution by the Court.

1 D. Facts Pertaining to Whether Prop. 8 Discriminates Based on Sexual Orientation, 2 Gender, or Both.

3 Plaintiffs will demonstrate at trial that Prop. 8 discriminates both on the basis of sexual 4 orientation and on the basis of gender. It discriminates on the basis of sexual orientation because it 5 prohibits gay and lesbian individuals from marrying the person they love. It discriminates on the 6 basis of gender because it either allows or does not allow a person to marry a particular other person 7 based solely on the first person's gender.

8 1. The History and Development of California's Exclusion of Same-Sex 9 Couples from Marriage.

10 Plaintiffs intend to present evidence concerning the history and development of California's 11 exclusion of same-sex couples from civil marriage, focusing specifically on Prop. 8, but also 12 addressing earlier similar efforts. Plaintiffs intend to present fact witness testimony from the 13 proponents of Prop. 8 and others who supported the campaign and documentary evidence. Plaintiffs 14 also will present expert testimony on this subject. While it may be possible for the parties to stipulate 15 as to certain publicly known and objectively verifiable facts concerning the history and development 16 of California's ban on same-sex marriage, Plaintiffs do not believe that a more comprehensive 17 stipulation with Intervenor on this subject is likely.

18 2. Whether the Availability of Opposite-Sex Marriage Is a Meaningful 19 Option for Gays and Lesbians.

20 Plaintiffs will present evidence at trial that excluding same-sex couples from the definition of 21 marriage in California's constitution denies gay and lesbian individuals the right to marry and that 22 telling gay and lesbian individuals that they are free to marry someone of the opposite sex does not 23 provide a meaningful option or meaningful access to civil marriage. Plaintiffs will present their own 24 testimony on this issue, possibly the testimony of other fact witnesses, and expert testimony.
25 Plaintiffs will depose Intervenor's experts. Intervenor has indicated that they may dispute this 26 point by presenting evidence that some gay and lesbian individuals do marry people of the opposite 27 sex.

28 Plaintiffs note that their claims are not dependent on whether it is a "meaningful option" for a gay or lesbian individual to marry someone of the opposite sex rather than the person they wish to marry who is of the same sex. The fundamental right to marry has been construed as the right to

1 marry the person of one's choice. For example, the plaintiffs prevailed in Loving v. Virginia, 388
2 U.S. 1 (1967), even though it may well have been a "meaningful option" for the plaintiffs to marry 3 someone of the same race. Similarly, even if it were a "meaningful option" for a person of one 4 religion to marry someone of the same religion, a ballot initiative barring inter-faith marriages would 5 certainly fail to pass constitutional muster.

6 3. Whether the Exclusion of Same-Sex Couples from Marriage Meaningfully 7 Restricts Options Available to Heterosexuals.

8 Plaintiffs will present evidence that Prop. 8 discriminates against gays and lesbians because it 9 restricts their ability to marry the person of their choice, while not restricting the ability of 10 heterosexuals to marry the person of their choice. Importantly, heterosexuals are not restricted from 11 marrying someone of the opposite sex even if that marriage will not further procreative purposes (for 12 example, if the person he or she would marry is infertile or has no interest in bearing children), or 13 would provide a less-than-optimal child-rearing environment (for example, if the person he or she 14 would marry has a history of physical abuse or has a substance abuse problem). Plaintiffs may 15 present testimony from fact witnesses other than themselves on this issue, and they will present 16 expert testimony. Plaintiffs will depose Intervenors' experts on this subject. Intervenors have 17 indicated that they may be willing to stipulate that Prop. 8 does not meaningfully restrict the options 18 available to heterosexuals, although they have not proposed specific language.

19 4. Whether Requiring One Man and One Woman in Marriage Promotes 20 Stereotypical Gender Roles.

21 Plaintiffs will present evidence at trial that excluding same-sex couples from the definition of 22 marriage serves no legitimate or rational purpose. Plaintiffs also will present evidence at trial that 23 Prop. 8 impermissibly discriminates on the basis of gender in addition to sexual orientation. This is 24 so because, under Prop. 8, a man is free to marry a person that a woman would be barred from 25 marrying solely because of her gender, and vice-versa. Plaintiffs believe that the issue of gender 26 stereotypes may become relevant to the extent Intervenors point to "tradition" as a justification for 27 Prop. 8, as perpetuation of tradition for tradition's sake may well perpetuate both stereotypes and 28 historical discrimination. This issue could also be relevant to the extent Intervenors argue that a household with a mother and father is an inherently better environment in which to raise children

1 than one with two parents of the same sex, as such an argument may well draw on gender 2 stereotypes. To the extent evidence on this issue is necessary, Plaintiffs would likely present it 3 through expert witness testimony. Plaintiffs will depose Intervenors' experts.

4 E. Facts Pertaining to Whether Prop. 8 Was Passed with Discriminatory Intent.

5 Plaintiffs will demonstrate that Prop. 8 lacks any compelling justification or even rational 6 basis, and was driven by discriminatory intent, animus, and moral disapproval of gay and lesbian 7 individuals. Numerous cases have recognized that the presence of animus or discriminatory intent is 8 directly relevant to whether a challenged law passes constitutional muster. See Romer v. Evans, 517 9 U.S. 620, 634 (1996) (laws such as Amendment 2 “raise the inevitable inference that the 10 disadvantage imposed is born of animosity toward the class of persons affected”); United States 11 Dep’t of Agric. v. Moreno, 413 U.S. 528, 534 (1973) (“For if the constitutional conception of ‘equal 12 protection of the laws’ means anything, it must at the very least mean that bare congressional desire 13 to harm a politically unpopular group cannot constitute a legitimate government interest.”); City of 14 Cleburne v. Cleburne Living Ctr., 473 U.S. 432 (1985) (striking down zoning ordinance requiring a 15 home for the mentally retarded to obtain a special use permit and finding that “[r]equiring the permit 16 in this case appears to rest on an irrational prejudice against the mentally retarded”).

17 Intervenors oppose any inquiry into the role of animus or discriminatory intent toward gay 18 and lesbian individuals on the part of the backers of Prop. 8 and those who supported it. Their 19 position cannot stand given the clear relevance of animus and discriminatory intent under Romer, 20 Moreno, and other controlling authorities. Intervenors argument that an inquiry into animus or 21 discriminatory intent is nevertheless improper because the Supreme Court in Romer did not 22 specifically address record evidence of animus in its passage, and focused instead on the absence of 23 any rational basis for Amendment 2, is without merit. Intervenors do not and cannot assert, of 24 course, that plaintiffs in Romer did not present evidence of animus behind Amendment 2. They did.
25 Moreover, the fact that a court may be able to infer animus and discriminatory intent from the fact 26 that a law lacks even a rational basis does not mean, as Intervenors seems to argue, that Plaintiffs 27 cannot present and the Court cannot consider direct evidence of animus and discriminatory intent to 28

1 support that conclusion. Lastly, the Supreme Court has directly addressed evidence of animus and 2 discriminatory intent in other cases such as Moreno and City of Cleburne.

3 1. The Voters’ Motivation or Motivations for Supporting Prop. 8, Including 4 Advertisements and Ballot Literature Considered by California Voters.

5 As discussed above, Plaintiffs will present evidence at trial that Prop. 8 was driven by animus 6 and moral disapproval of gay and lesbian individuals, both on the part of those driving the initiative
7 and on the part of voters. Plaintiffs will prove this through testimony from the proponents of Prop. 8 8 and other fact witnesses, documents pertaining to the initiative, and expert testimony. Plaintiffs will 9 require fact discovery on this issue in the form of testimony and documents from the proponents of 10 Prop. 8 and possibly other fact witnesses. Intervenors have taken the position that evidence of their 11 motivations or those of the voters is irrelevant. Plaintiffs strongly disagree and submit that evidence 12 of animus and discriminatory intent on the part of the proponents of Prop. 8 and those who supported 13 it is directly relevant to Plaintiffs’ claims and the controlling legal standard.

14 2. The Differences in Actual Practice of Registered Domestic Partnerships, 15 Civil Unions and Marriage, Including Whether Married Couples Are 16 Treated Differently from Domestic Partners in Governmental and 17 Non-Governmental Contexts.

18 Plaintiffs will present evidence at trial that although California affords to gay and lesbian 19 citizens many of the same substantive rights available to married couples through domestic 20 partnerships, there are significant and meaningful differences between those institutions. Plaintiffs 21 will present their own testimony concerning the significance of marriage, and also expert testimony 22 concerning differences between the institutions and how people are treated in both the governmental 23 and non-governmental context. Plaintiffs and Intervenors agree that they will likely be able to 24 stipulate to differences in treatment by the government that are reflected in statutes or regulations, 25 but that agreements as to how people may be treated differently in the private sphere will be 26 more difficult.

IV.
PROPOSED SCHEDULE

Plaintiffs respectfully propose the following schedule for this action.

Fact Discovery Cutoff	October 2, 2009
Exchange Expert Reports	October 9, 2009
Exchange Rebuttal Expert Reports	October 19, 2009
Expert Discovery Cutoff	October 23, 2009
Dispositive Motions Due	October 30, 2009
Hearing on Dispositive Motions	November 20, 2009
Pre-Trial Conference	December 7, 2009
Trial	December 14, 2009

In order to facilitate the above-described expedited schedule, Plaintiffs propose that the time for responding to all written discovery be shortened to 14 calendar days, that all documents be produced on the day that written responses to document requests are served, and that all discovery disputes be resolved on an abbreviated schedule whereby a motion is filed, the response is due seven days later, and the Court decides the motion within fourteen days of filing.

1 Intervenor propose a schedule that consists of two rounds of briefing, no trial, and would not 2 be concluded before July 2010 at the earliest. While Intervenor offer speed as one reason to bypass
3 a trial in this action, Plaintiffs' proposed schedule would bring this case to conclusion roughly seven 4 months earlier than Intervenor's proposal. Given the importance of the issues raised by Plaintiffs' 5 claims, the Court's decision to defer ruling on Plaintiffs' motion for preliminary injunction, and the 6 fact that Plaintiffs suffer irreparable harm each day that Prop. 8 remains in effect, the Court should 7 not impose a schedule that takes more than a year to get from the filing of Plaintiffs' Complaint to 8 a Judgment.
